HPA Career of the Month: Forensic Science

The Cost of Applying to Med School

Secondary applications from most if not all of your schools, and those range from $0 to $100+ depending on the student. The MCAT costs $300, but preparation can range from a few hundred to thousands of dollars. The various interviews can cost anywhere from $300 to $600 depending on the proximity of the interviews, and there is a certain amount of travel time and professional clothes, travel, lodging (which is critical for school selection), and a number of free applications.

The average cost that a student spends on applying is $2,000 to $3,000, but this cost will vary widely. The MCAT costs $300, but preparation can range from a few hundred to thousands of dollars. The various interviews can cost anywhere from $300 to $600 depending on the proximity of the interviews, and there is a certain amount of travel time and professional clothes, travel, lodging (which is critical for school selection), and a number of free applications.

The Average Med School Application Costs

- MCAT: $300
- Secondary applications: $0 to $100+
- Interviews: $300 to $600
- Travel, lodging, professional clothes: Varies

The average cost that a student spends on applying is $2,000 to $3,000, but this cost will vary widely. The MCAT costs $300, but preparation can range from a few hundred to thousands of dollars. The various interviews can cost anywhere from $300 to $600 depending on the proximity of the interviews, and there is a certain amount of travel time and professional clothes, travel, lodging (which is critical for school selection), and a number of free applications.

The average cost that a student spends on applying is $2,000 to $3,000, but this cost will vary widely. The MCAT costs $300, but preparation can range from a few hundred to thousands of dollars. The various interviews can cost anywhere from $300 to $600 depending on the proximity of the interviews, and there is a certain amount of travel time and professional clothes, travel, lodging (which is critical for school selection), and a number of free applications.